An Article of Prof. SATish P. Deore HOD, Prof. Visal Gosavi & Mr. Kailas Gaikawad of Civil Engineering, Department has been published recently in the Internatinal E-Journal Name Internatonal Journal for Scientific Reaserch & Development. The Title of the article is investigating and learning more about Self healing concrete.

Concrete is a widely accessible and inexpensive building material. Therefore, improvement in concrete aims to increase its compressive strength and structural longevity by the use of micro organisms harbouring MICP.

The goal of the current work is to use a microbiologically induced unique growth to improve the performance of concrete. One of these has resulted to the creation of a highly specific type of concrete known as self healing concrete, which uses bacteria to repair flaws in the mortar and concrete. Researchers using various microbes suggested various concretes. Using the bacteria "Bacillus subtilius," an attempt was made in this instance. According to this investigation, the presence of bacteria significantly increased the compressive strength. In this research we add 10ml, 20ml, and 30ml bacteria in concrete and check its compressive strength at 7days, 14days & 28days. We observed that 30ml Bacteria added in concrete gives maximum

Cleanliness Drive at Ramshej Fort by NSS

More than hundred volunteers of the college participated in this event

A Cleanliness Drive was recently conducted at Ramshej Fort under the 'Swachh Bharat Abhiyan' by the National Service Scheme Unit of 'Mahavir Polytechnic' College. More than hundred volunteers of the college participated in this campaign. Swachhta Abhinaya was launched in the presence of coordinator of National Service Scheme Unit and teachers of the college. All of them collected plastic from the temple on the fort and from the foothills. From these efforts, 7 sacks of plastic were collected at Ramshej fort.

"The condition of the fort was in a mess as there was garbage everywhere. We have collected plastic bottles, cups, noodle packets, tender coconut shells, straw and all such things outside the fort. There was a lot of plastic waste inside the fort as well." NSS Coordinators said.
